Our bed experts have put together some tips and techniques for the general, day-to-day care of your new McKenzie & Willis bed as a quick reference for when life happens...

It may seem obvious but...when you receive your new bed always ensure you remove all the packaging before use!

There are three simple care tips to give you and your bed has a quality life together:

Rotate your mattress

Rotating your mattress regularly will help increase the life of your mattress. We recommend rotating it every 2 weeks for the first 4 months and then at the change of every season.

Keep your mattress clean & dry

We recommend you protect your mattress with a quality, washable mattress protector. You should vacuum your mattress regularly to prevent any dust from settling into the fibres.

Spot Clean

For spills it is important to clean them immediately, remove as much of the excess as possible by gently scraping with a knife ensuring you work from the outer edge inwards to avoid spreading it even further. Use warm soapy water as a general cleaning agent to remove the residue and blot the area repeatedly with a cloth. We recommend always testing any cleaning agents on a small, non-visible area first to see if it will affect the fabric.

Ensure you do not saturate the fabric when spot cleaning and do not scrub your mattress with a brush or use dishwashing or laundry detergents.

Dry the area thoroughly in the shade, away from direct heat.

We also think it is also important to note the following:

- The average lifespan of a quality mattress is approximately 10 years. After 10 years the comfort features begin to deteriorate and support capabilities diminish.
- There may be a settling period of 8 to 12 weeks with your new mattress as the materials need time to conform to your body shape and weight. It is guaranteed to feel different from the mattress you have been sleeping on but you will soon adjust.
- For customers that are purchasing a King, Super King and Californian King mattress it is recommended that you use the middle of the mattress to settle it evenly. So if you are reading a book, on your phone or even watching television in your bedroom please try and use the middle of the mattress, so that the mattress can settle and loosen evenly.

By following this simple advice you will get the most out of your top quality McKenzie & Willis bed. Our sales consultants are always available to offer further advice on any of our beds should you need it, simply call your nearest McKenzie & Willis showroom.

Please Note: All McKenzie & Willis beds come with care instructions from their individual manufacturers. It is important that you read these carefully and refer to them as they are specific to the product and the materials used in its construction.
